BORAH RESOLUTION CAME ON HEELS OF NEGOTIATIONS

HARDING ALREADY CONSIDERING CONFERENCE TO FOLLOW PARLEY.

EUROPE MUST ACT First Must Come a Settlement of Economic Difficulties.

By DAVID LAWRENCE Copyright, 1922, by Janesville Daily Gazette.

Washington.—Opposition to Senator Borah's proposal for an international economic conference is not aimed at the principle of a conference to restore economic normality in Europe and the world generally, but at the timeliness of the measure.

Administrators who are lining up against the Borah resolution which would authorize the president to summon an international conference, have been advised privately that the executive branch of the government already has been discussing the project with other powers and that action by the senate might be construed as committing the United States government to a course of action which it might otherwise wish to avoid.

Curiously enough Mr. Borah's proposal and the circumstances which surround it are almost identical with the situation which existed before the world war. At that time Mr. Borah called for the reduction of tariff duties and the president was in negotiation with other governments when Mr. Borah's resolution was passed and it looked to the outside world as if the president had world affairs in his hands. The record at the department of state will show that the subject was being discussed in diplomatic channels long before it was mentioned in the senate.

Mr. Harding's Position

Mr. Harding is not averse to the idea of an international economic conference. He would gladly have America participate in one, but he has not made up his mind to accept the world for him to take the initiative. Upon the country calling any international conference rests the responsibility for the program.

When the emergency conference was in session, Secretary Hughes said before the assembled nations at the outset the sacrifices America was willing to make. Such an obligation might seem to be imposed again.

Bernhardt Has Relapse

Paris.—Madame Sarah Bernhardt's condition, which turned for the worse Wednesday, has improved. Physicians ascribed it to the fatigue following her activity yesterday when she arose from her bed, partook of solid food and received many callers. The actress' household is again depressed although Madame herself is just as confident as ever that she will recover.

Monroe Church Is Burned to Ground

Victor Arnold Arrested on Fraud Charge in New York

(By Associated Press.) Madison.—Victor H. Arnold, former president of the Madison Bond company, now in a New York jail charged with using the United States mails to defraud, will be arraigned at the January term of the U. S. district court when it meets in New York, unless successful in a fight against removal to Wisconsin, District Attorney W. H. Dougherty declared today.

Meanwhile, the sensational career of Arnold during his residence in the city was the topic of conversation. His personification of Santa Claus during the 1921 Christmas season, when he was said to have expended $50,000 for gifts to the poor, was recalled. Looking back to his first claim to fame locally, residents remembered the visit of Norman Talmadge, then governor of New York, to the city. Arnold's home was one of the social centers of the town.

Arnold was indicted Wednesday by the federal grand jury for the eastern district of Wisconsin which is investigating his transactions in the bond company business. The bond company started on its path to bankruptcy by the failure of the federal grand jury to return a bill of indictment against Arnold, who had been charged with embezzlement of funds and asked stockholders to return their stocks over to him for his personal note to aid the firm over a critical period. The charges were dropped.

After the bond company bought a church for an office and undertook business on a larger scale and Arnold took the pupil in local churches, lecturing on Christianity, the story of the simple truths, the story of Christianity as it is told in the Bible, he said in his first sermon. "You want religion that is founded on the golden rule, that is and as reliable as the religion of the world." (Continued on page 5)

REMOVE PERSONAL PROPERTY OFFSET, COMMISSION PLEA

REPORT TO GOVERNOR BY TAX BODY ASKS CHANGES.

RAP "UNIFORMITY" Income Tax Rate Above $10,000 Mark Urged.

(By Associated Press.) Madison.—Removal of the personal property tax offset to the income tax, an amendment to the constitution to remove the uniformity provision with regard to taxation, increase in income tax rates, reappropriation of the returns from the income tax, and taxation of bank deposits, are among the recommendations made by the Wisconsin Tax commission Wednesday in its report to Gov. J. E. Blaine. The commission also recommends that the income tax be levied on the basis of the total income of the individual.

The commission report contains no mention of the secrecy clause in the constitution, which provides that no law shall be passed which shall require the disclosure of the income of any individual. The commission recommends that the secrecy clause be repealed, or at least that it be amended to require the disclosure of the income of individuals only in cases where both the state and the federal government have a right to know.

An outline of the tax commission recommendations, which have been prepared by the state tax department, is as follows: The constitutional provision requiring that "the rule of taxation shall be uniform" be amended to enable taxation of income, based on the total income of the individual, on a different basis than taxation of income, and to provide for reduction of income tax on the basis of the total income of the individual.

ASHLAND CHURCH IS ROBBED BY VANDALS

Ashland.—Vandals broke into the St. Andrews Episcopal church here Sunday night and stole a five gallon jug partly filled with wine used for communion purposes and a wine crucifix with a silver ball and cross mounted stopper. This is the second time within 10 days that the church has been entered.

Get the Big Ones; Never Mind the Little "Hippers"

(By Associated Press.) Milwaukee.—A severe denunciation of the methods employed by William Loose and Ivan Kancher, federal prohibition agents, was made today by the state courts, was delivered by Judge George E. Page from the bench in district court Monday.

The denunciation came from the judge after the floors had preferred charges against a widow and two men, each charged with carrying "hippers" and then attempted to have the truck of Konstantin Labinski, Milwaukee, confiscated because Labinski was transporting five gallons of liquor for a friend. The attempt at confiscation was made after the judge had fined Labinski $200 and costs for violating the Prohibition law.

Operating in Federal Court "You men should not be permitted to operate in the state courts," the judge declared.

(By Associated Press.) Seattle, Wash.—The morality of each Roscoe Arbuckle motion picture will determine whether or not it is to be shown here, the Seattle Board of Theater Censors has decided.

The board determined not to pass on the fitness of Arbuckle to return to motion pictures. "The duty of the board is to pass on the morals of pictures and not of individuals," it declared.

CORN RECEIPTS AT CHICAGO SET MARK

Chicago.—Corn receipts at Chicago for 1922 broke all previous records, totalling around 23,000,000 bushels; wheat receipts were 11,350,000 bushels. The total receipts of the five leading grains was 29,065,000 bushels more than 1921.

SCANDAL MONGERS WORST OFFENDERS, DECLARES OFFICIAL

Ironwood, Mich.—The "scandal-mongers" are the worst offenders of the law in Ironwood, in the opinion of Mrs. Josephine E. Washington, city policeman, who reviewed the activities of her first six months as chief of police. "I have conclusive evidence against this type of people," Mrs. Washington declared, "and while they are the worst offenders in the community they are fast becoming a back number."

CAZENOVIA MAN DIDN'T DEMOLISH POST—WHO DID?

Investigation of the marshal at Cazenovia, Tuesday, at the request of City Clerk E. J. Sartell, revealed that Peter Morik did not have his car out of his garage on the day he was supposed to have been here. The investigation was brought about when a bystander turned to make a remark, reporting to be the one on the car which smashed an ornamental light post at the corner of Dodge and Franklin streets, Sunday night. If Peter Morik didn't do it, who did? That is what police are wondering.

NEW POLISH HEAD NOTED ECONOMIST

Stanislas Wojciechowski, Poland's new president, Stanislas Wojciechowski, summoned to that office following the assassination of President Narutowicz, is well known internationally as an economist. He was minister of the interior under Paderewski and is a member of the Moderate party.

Wrote for Mayor. A message received by the Great Lakes Towing company, formerly of the tug Cornell, formerly the Grace Danforth, search of Lake Erie, in an effort to solve the mystery surrounding the disappearance of the vessel, was continued Wednesday. Finding of lifeboat containing the frozen body of Michael Payton, one of the eight members of the crew, dispelled any belief that the Cornell is still in the water and only record of the Cornell having been sighted since she left here Thursday afternoon for Buffalo, where she was to have been delivered to her new owners, a Syracuse firm.

What happened to the missing craft after that is purely speculation and conjecture. The Gillmer and several other tugs reached their search early today. H. E. Shaver, superintendent of the air mail flying field here, said three planes would be dispatched to Erie to fly over the lake between the Cornell and Long Point, Ontario, provided tugs are so stationed as to guarantee the safety of the aviators in the event of a forced landing.

Conditions are improving and money is becoming more plentiful. It would appear from the early response to the 10,000 city tax notices for 1923 delivered to Janesville taxpayers Tuesday, that the collection of taxes in the mails by City Treasurer W. J. Lennartz, Christmas day, the bills had not been out of his hands 24 hours before citizens were entering the treasurer's office dealing to get the money out of the way at once, and by Wednesday noon Mr. Lennartz had taken in some $4,000 in checks.

Mr. Lennartz says he will accept no cash payments until the official opening of the collection period next Tuesday morning, as he does not wish to mix up 1923 business with that of the old year. He will, however, accept checks to be cashed after Jan. 1 but will not receive the receipts if he receives them before Jan. 1. Tax payments may be made also at any of the local banks, starting Tuesday, this being a new convenience made possible under the revised collection system.

COMPOSITE FARM BILL IS PLANNED

Lentot and Capper Measures to Form Basis of New Legislation.

Washington.—Active work on a composite farm bill was begun Wednesday at an executive session of the senate banking commission, which has before it many divergent proposals for legislation to help the farmer. Chairman McLean said it would be a week or 10 days before the committee bill would be ready.

The work of the committee will be directed, it was explained, toward some form of relief which would not only short credits to aid in producing crops but also long time paper to help the cattle industry and to facilitate marketing.

It was suggested that the pending Lentot and Capper bills would be used as a basis for the composite measure. Chairman McLean was uncertain whether any further public hearings would be held, but indicated that such hearings would be held if the committee bill was not ready by the time the Lentot and Capper bills were introduced.

HUGH SHADE SALES PLAN IS EXPLAINED

How the silent salesman of the Hough Shade company brings business to the Janesville factory without a salesman visiting the customers was told at the weekly meeting of the Hough club at the Grand hotel, Wednesday noon, by L. J. Steffen. The idea is a novel one and has been worked successfully. Letters are sent out to prospective customers announcing that the silent salesman will arrive the next day. In the letter a key is enclosed with a working model of the shade. Lot of shade, the silent salesman brings the business, Mr. Steffen said.

Writ Issued for Mayor

Baltimore.—A writ of habeas corpus for Dr. D. M. McKim, former mayor of Baltimore, Md., arrested here on a charge of murder, was obtained Wednesday. The writ, issued by Chief Judge Gortler in city court, was made returnable immediately.

Dr. McKim, a statement signed by J. A. Sylvester of Gaston, has been issued to the press in which doubt is expressed as to the identity of the bodies found in Lake LaFayette and claimed by relatives as those of Walter Daniels and Thomas Richards, alleged victims of a hooded mob.

Sylvester has been credited with many public announcements regarding the local Klan and is looked on by many as one of its spokesmen.

HUSBAND NEED NOT PAY FOR DEFENSE OF WIFE, RULING

Detroit.—Noy J. Ford, farmer of Dearborn, will not have to finance his wife's defense in a charge that she sought to have him killed, Circuit Judge Dingemans ruled Wednesday in denying a motion by counsel for Mrs. May E. Ford, that the husband be required to advance $5,000 for that purpose.

Mrs. Ford recently was held for trial on a charge of attempting homicide after a detective testified that she had tried to shoot her husband. Judge Dingemans held that Mrs. Ford could have an attorney, appointed by the trial court if she is without funds.

FARM NEWS

Turtle Town Favors
County-Wide Test

Turtle township wants the county-wide test.

This expression was made by W. J. Rath, supervisor and farm owner, east of Beloit, during the meeting held in Shopiere Tuesday night. Canvassing has started in Turtle and the school district covered by W. J. Dougan, Beloit, signed 100 percent.

Organization work was completed in Milton township at a meeting held in Milton Junction Tuesday afternoon. A meeting was held in the Turtle town hall also during the afternoon at which time the county-wide program was discussed. All farmers present, including a number of farmers who feed stock, were in favor of the area work.

A good program was given at the Shopiere meeting, including the motion picture and talk by Dr. Arthur J. Kilians. There were 60 present.

The next meeting is in Johnstown on Friday night. This is the last township to be organized.

"We are sure of at least 75 percent but still working to secure the 2,000 signatures for a 90 percent petition," declared Dr. Kilians on Wednesday. All township leaders and canvassers are being urged to complete the canvassing work, visiting every cattle owner, so that the check can be made at the end of this week.

Dam of Prize Calf
Has Twin Heifers

Funk Brothers, Janesville, had a lucky Christmas. One of their record Holstein cows, White Mercedes Elgin, the prize junior calf at the 1922 Wisconsin state fair dropped twin heifer calves the day before Christmas. The twins were sired by Beauty Johnnie Kornyske Vale with a record on the dam's side of 700 pounds milk and 23.96 pounds of fat. The prize winning calf is again being primed for the Rock county Holstein show and the new twins should be good prospects for the fair.

County Sale Cow
Sets 29.47 Record

Here's an example of what Rock county Holsteins can do in production.

At the last sale of the Rock county Holstein association, Roy J. Miller, living west of Janesville, purchased Helen Rag Apple Johanna, consigned by Archie Reed Jr. She was an untested cow from a production standpoint but was a big, heavy animal with considerable dairy qualities.

On the first test he ever run Miller put a record of 29.47 pounds of fat in seven days on this cow. He declares the cow would have made a 30 pound record easily had exceptional care been taken. The test period may be continued.

Seek More Members
for Test Circuit

Additional members are being sought for the Clinton-Rock county cow testing association.

Fifteen new members will again do testing work the coming season. When the association limited to Shorthorn cattle was formed, a number of breeders of the dual-purpose cattle left the Clinton circuit. The association takes in the district around Clinton and east of Janesville.

The Milton-Rock county association is now being formed by County Agent R. T. Glasco.

Many farmers while expressing a desire to join a cow testing association are holding off until the county-wide test is made for bovine tuberculosis. Once the test is completed the organization of cow testing associations will be pushed.

Any farmer wishing to join the Clinton-Rock county association is urged to communicate with David Dean, Avalon.

SPECIAL ELECTION
FOR KINNEY SEAT

Madison—A special election must be called by Governor Blaine within a reasonable time to select a successor to Senator-elect O. G. Kinney, who died Tuesday, the attorney general's office said Wednesday unofficially.

The constitution makes it mandatory on him to order the election, which may not be held less than 35 days after it is called.

A close division between La Follette-Blaine forces and their opponents within the republican party is expected in the district. It is believed likely that Senator Ray J. Nye will announce himself as candidate for the position as the anti-administration representative.

A Janesville of Sixty Thousand People

More Than Fifty Cities and Towns Covered by the Gazette

A Wonderfully Rich Sales Territory From Which To Draw Additional Sales

The remarkably intense circulation of The Gazette in its field in southern Wisconsin is the subject of favorable comment wherever newspaper men gather.

This remarkably intense circulation is the result of the ambition of The Gazette to offer its advertisers the very best service possible.

This remarkably intense circulation of The Gazette is offered to advertisers at a remarkably small cost—it costs only four-fifths of a cent for each home into which a page ad is delivered—the cheapest possible way to reach this large audience.

This remarkably intense circulation has been built up through the unusual amount of reader interest The Gazette has been able to produce through its various department features.

Such features as the Farm Department, the Financial and Market Department, the Community and Good Times Club Department, the Country Correspondent's Department, the Local News Department, the Sports Department, the Dramatic and Amusement Department, contribute daily thought of paramount interest to Janesville and the fifty cities and towns wherein The Gazette circulates.

The circulation of The Gazette is a quick one going as it does the day of publication to twenty-two cities and towns in the immediate trade area of Janesville. The papers are delivered to many of these towns by Gazette automobiles which reach out in six different directions, like six fingers, from Janesville.

In planning your 1923 advertising take these foregoing things into full consideration.

Present day methods contemplate the appropriation of a specific amount, based usually on the sales of the previous year, to be used for newspaper advertising during the coming year.

It has been found that this appropriation is absorbed in the increased volume of business produced over that of the previous year, without in any way adding to present overhead costs such as light, rent, heat, etc.

Hit or miss, spasmodic use of advertising copy is not the profitable way to advertise. Consistent, regular insertions on definite days is the kind of advertising that produces a maximum of return.

Complete Daily Report Furnished By a Leased Associated Press Wire

Baldwin and a number of other speculators imported a firm tone to opening prices in Wednesday's stock market. New high records for the year were established during the first minutes by P. W. Weller, Stromberg Carborundum and Studebaker, the last named touching 11 1/4 points above the year's high.

Good buying also was noted in American Locomotive, U. S. Alcohol, Paine Webber, Sugar, General Asphalt and California Petroleum, the gains ranging from large fractions to 1 1/2 points. Consolidated Gas was conspicuously weak, dropping two points and Marine preferred dropping to 1 1/2, the lowest of the year.

Business also was noted in Pan American, B. L. Brothers, A. B. and Pont and Washington. Foreign exchange opened easier.

Early gains were not long maintained, the market sagging around the middle of the day. A large volume of profit taking and short selling, which depressed many shares 1/4 to 1/2 points below Thursday's closing, was followed by a recovery. Stromberg and Locomotive Railroad turned decidedly weak, each dropping 1/2 point.

Lack of support for some of the high grade railroad shares and a lack of technical support resulted from the rapidity of the recent advance among certain industrial stocks precipitated much of the selling.

Signs of recuperation. Call money opened at 5 per cent.

Speculations were somewhat confused in the final hour, speculators for the advance finding it difficult to find most stock responses to a heavy supply at higher levels. Baldwin and American Locomotive continued their rise to higher ground, the former touching 11 1/4 and the latter more than 4 points. The closing was irregular. Sales 1,000,000 shares.

The Woman Worker Problem

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Washington.—A ray of light has just been shed on some widely discussed questions about the woman worker. It is often asserted that a large proportion of married women now work in stores and offices and that many of them do so merely to buy luxuries. The criticism is made that these women whose husbands could support them are holding positions needed by men and single girls.

The person making a statement of this sort always gives a quotation at least one case of a wife who works so that she can spend her vacation at an expensive resort and who is brought to work by her husband in a palatial motor car. But what percentage of married women do they really represent?

And, to open another controversy, do the paucity of working women spend their money on themselves, or do they have dependents and responsibilities as it is assumed that the majority of men workers have?

The minimum wage is supposed to give a woman a living wage for herself alone. No thought is given to the possibility of the working girl having dependents. And yet, it is economically just, as matters are today, to assume that she has no one but herself to take care of, and that therefore her thin pay envelope really equals a man's fat one?

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE SOWER.

I watched him treading through the field
Preparing for his harvest yield.
A man of strength and vigor
But untutored and unclear;
The proud would scorn the garb he wore
And turn him coldly from the door,
The dainty in his presence
Would have shuddered to be seen.

And as I watched I thought of him,
Rough-handed and of visage grim,
The sower, ankle deep in earth,
Distributing his seed;
Yet those who looked at him in scorn
And only saw his garments torn
Some day upon his snow-white wheat
In luxury would feed.

Out of the common comes the great,
Beyond the task the joys await;
Rough be the hand which sows the seed,
But white and soft the bread.
From them the haughty may despise,
The splendors of the world arise,
The bread of life is sown,
May be a ruler's bed.

Turn not away from any man
Who serves the Maker's mighty plan.
The sower does not work in pride
Or costly garments wear.
And from the mire which marked the past
A genius may arise at last.
The mother in the tenement
A royal child may bear.

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

PROSTITUTE.

Every reasonably human being should know what to do in certain emergencies, such as drowning accidents, suffocation by gas, electric shock (how to perform Scherer's easy method of artificial respiration), sunstroke, fainting and frostbite. These are the things which, if done properly, will save lives. The victim is injured by dramatic effects which something might be done for him by any bystander who is prepared. Preparedness is due to talk about, but it is a sin and a shame that the great majority of apparently intelligent adults can do nothing but freeze, scoughing, and all the subsequent effects seen in a deep burn.

Is the nose, the cheek, the ear or other part frostbitten? If the color returns very slowly after the frostbite, the finger is removed, yes. If the redness is accompanied by swelling, yes. If the redness is followed by a blanching or whitening of the part, yes. If numbness or tingling or burning, yes, it is a case of frostbite. Chills are a mild form of frostbite, characterized chiefly by tingling, aching, smarting, numbness, and frequently recurring first degree frostbite.

If frostbite is severe, the blanching is followed after an hour or two by a business of redness and blistering of the skin. Frostbite is even more serious than after a burn of similar degree. If the frostbite is of the third degree the surface becomes black and blue or marble like, there is no sensation or pain, and blisters cover the skin. This means gangrene—local death—and all the concomitants of that condition, sloughing, ulceration, suppuration.

The treatment for frostbite should be stimulation of the individual with hot coffee, and the application of general warmth—hot water, hot foot baths, etc. But for ordinary nips of the cheek, ear or nose, moderate massage with snow or cool water is sufficient, and this should be carefully done to avoid blistering by friction. The rubbing and massaging should cause the instant a natural color returns to the bitten skin. This usually occurs after a few seconds of treatment. In ordinary frostbite, excessive rubbing will do more harm than the bite itself, for at the worst there is a mere peeling of cuticle as after a sunburn.

KENOSHA POINTS THE WAY.

When Kenosha, a year ago, adopted the city manager plan of government, the citizens got together and elected a high class council—business and professional men who were willing to devote time to the devising of a program which would insure to municipal benefit. As in the Janesville law, these men served without pay. They knew that the greatest job of all was the hiring of a manager and after many weeks determined upon one with several years experience in city management elsewhere and hired him at a salary of $8,000 a year. The manager, Mr. Osborn, has taken time and expended much care on a final plan which has been adopted by the city for the government under the new system. There are eight departments in which the old methods and cooperative looseness have been completely done away with. All these departments are under the city manager and all general business is transacted without any wasted time or red tape by the council. These are the schedules under the city manager plan and Janesville can profit much by the way they will work out:

Department of finance, to be charged with the duties now evolving upon the city clerk, the city treasurer, the city assessor and the city comptroller, all under the direction of one man to be known as the director of finance.

Department of public works, to be charged with the operation of the water department, the cleaning and repaving of all sewers and bridges, the collection and disposal of sewage, the management and operation of the city garage. This department to be under direction of the director of public works.

Department of public safety, under which will come the management of the fire and police departments and the department of inspection, the latter dealing with building, heating, plumbing and weight inspection. This department to be directly under the city manager.

Department of engineering, to be charged with the planning and building of all new pavements, sewers, sidewalks, river and harbor work, the department to be under the control of one man known as the city engineer.

Department of health, charged with the duties pertaining to the public health and under the direction of the director of health.

Department of outdoor relief, to be charged with taking care of the poor under the director of outdoor relief.

Department of parks and public properties, under the director of parks.

Department of law, under the direction of the city attorney.

All departments are to be responsible to the city manager and he in turn is responsible to the city council.

The first thing in order to carry out the city manager plan in Janesville, is the election of seven members of the council from the city at large. All the voters in the city vote for the seven. These men will constitute the new board of directors and the old city government goes out of business in April at the same time it would under the old procedure. The new council then takes up the government of the city. The president of that council of seven acts as president of the city, otherwise the office of mayor is abolished. Until it elects a city manager the affairs of the city are conducted by this council and heads of the regularly constituted departments report to it. There is nothing complicated about the manager plan. It can be simplified to the very lowest terms in red tape. Efficiency and action are the chief aims and objectives. That they will be attainable in Janesville is the experience of others.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By ROY K. MOULTON.

ELEMENTARY TRUTHS ON "STOMACH ACHES"

"Dya ever have a funny pain 'Bout midway in your middle? And let the wise boys poke around To try and solve it? Well, the Chiropractor tells you that Your spine should be 'adjusted.' Your family doctor tells you that Your liver's warped and rusted, And they're both wrong, my dear sir. 'You have no pain at all, sir!' Xot smile and nod, but you know well That nothing could be fuser. Then Freud lends you a helping hand; He says you are neurotic. Perhaps you got that complex 'cause Your thoughts were too erotic!

If you still have that funny pain When all these birds have spouted, Why, buy a dose of castor oil, And you'll wake up without it!"

—James P. E. Zweighaft.

AN IDEAL NEIGHBORHOOD.

The neighbors are banded together for their mutual benefit, and everybody works to promote the comfort and convenience of the neighborhood.

When a quart of milk falls from a window ledge and shatters itself on the head of a neighbor, the neighbor immediately goes out and buys another quart of milk for the bereft family.

When a young lady practices singing lessons at home, the neighbors all gather in the parlor of her home and applaud and encourage her. They are particularly demonstrative in their applause at night.

When a man falls over a neighbor's baby car in the hall and smashes it up beyond recognition, he immediately telephones to a department store for another baby car and presents it to his neighbor to square matters.

When a gentleman and his wife are having an argument, the neighbors all look up their apartments and go downtown so that they cannot hear what is said.

When two children have a battle in the street, each mother blames her own child for the trouble and chastises him severely.

When a man owns a car and automobile and takes his neighbors out riding, the neighbors always insist upon paying for the gasoline and the dinner at the roadside.

P. S.—There isn't no such neighborhood.

Methuselah wasn't entitled to so much credit after all. There were no gunmen and no poison hooch in his day.

Q. Is it true that a Christmas dance is performed in a church in Spain? J. H. K.

A. One beautiful feature of the "Mesa de Gallo" in the great Cathedral of Seville is the "Mesa de Gallo" or "interweaving of steps" by the choir boys, who thus dance before the high altar. This reverent dance, which is given but twice a year, is witnessed by the chanting of the choir boys, who carry tall lighted candles as they cross and recross up and down the wide choir steps. One of the occasions is the celebration of the feast of Corpus Christi on Good Friday.

Q. Is a magnolia sometimes called a "magnolia tree"? A. E. T.

A. The tulip tree is one of the magnolia family.

Q. What metal is the heaviest? E. B. A.

A. The platinum group of minerals is the heaviest. Native iridium holds the list.

Q. Was Senator Sherman really the author of the anti-trust law, that bears his name? D. G. A.

A. Senator Sherman originally proposed and introduced the bill. It was perfected by the judiciary committee of the United States senate, and there has always been controversy over the question of the authorship of the bill. Senator Sherman, chairman of the committee, declared that nearly every member of the committee participated in the work of preparing the bill.

Q. Are some of a horse's muscles enclosed as strength muscles and some as speed muscles? E. J. T.

A. The law framed by E. J. Marey and known as Marey's law. "The muscles of speed in the horse are long and slender, and those of strength short and thick."

Q. Who invented the first navigational instrument? J. H.

A. To the Greeks, Alexander of Alexandria is attributed this invention. The following account is given: "Mariners had observed that the farther north they went the higher the stars rose in the heavens, and it was an arrangement of two sticks hinged together, so that when one was held horizontally and the other pointed to the pole star the angle they made would indicate how far north the observer was."

Q. Is a "truffle-hound" a slang phrase? P. F.

A. In France truffles are located and dug out of the ground with the aid of dogs and pigs. The latter are commonly used in Périgord, their rooting instincts and fine nose for scent being turned into account. A trained dog will sniff the necessary odor and will make directly for it, either laying it bare or uprooting it, to be rewarded with an acorn or

Who's Who Today

PROF. NIELS BOHR.

Prof. Niels Bohr, winner of the 1922 Nobel prize in physics, is the youngest scientist in that particular field to be so honored by the Nobel prize committee. His theory of researches into the structure of the atom earned him the prize.

Bohr was born in Copenhagen in 1879. He received his M. Sc. degree in 1902 and his Ph. D. in 1903. He was appointed to the chair of theoretical physics at the University of Copenhagen. For some years he was also attached to an English university as a lecturer. In his findings and studies he has gone further than Sir Ernest Rutherford, a former Nobel prize winner. Bohr, however, gives full credit to Sir Ernest as leader and declares that his researches have been built up on what the English scientist had already revealed.

He likewise says that he owes much to Prof. Planck's theory which broke down the classical mechanism, such as Newton's, as well as the classical electro-dynamic theory advanced by Maxwell.

When presented with the award Prof. Bohr expressed his satisfaction that the 1921 prize had gone to Prof. Einstein, who had utilized individualistic ideas. Bohr said he was glad that the day of merely theoretical opinion was vanishing quickly to give place to practical application of just such scientific deductions as Einstein's.

THE DEATH OF JOHN CLIFFORD.

PUBLISHER.

In the sudden and tragic death of John C. Clifford, publisher of the Watertown Times, the newspaper profession has lost an able member and the state and his home city of Watertown, a man who was ever in earnest for the best there was for the community. In the last year Mr. Clifford had made many and interesting changes in the Times and it was looking ahead in its field as one of the live and important daily papers of the state. He knew his community, having been reared in Dodge county, occupied in his younger days a position of importance in the county government and as the publisher of a weekly at the county seat, had made and held many friends. They tried to send him to congress in 1918 but the district being overwhelmingly republican, he did not succeed. However, the vote of his own county and throughout the district was a tribute to his honorable career. In the Wisconsin Daily League and in other activities in which he was concerned he will be greatly missed.

When Europe failed to find a forgiveness of debts to the United States in its Christmas stocking, it was real peeved.

Manager Nelson of the Chamber of Commerce is packing a lot of work for somebody and the organization has never been in better shape to do many worthwhile things for Janesville than now. There is great opportunity for every member to do something to make the program laid out for the new year a complete success.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

Pandora Nicholson is so painfully shy and self-conscious that it is almost agony for her to go into a room in which there are strangers. She believes herself to be one of the stupidest people alive; her Aunt Maude has frequently said so, and she cannot get on with the youthful society of Norristown. She cannot enter into the boisterous merry-making which is a poor relation in the home of a prosperous brother, Peter, his wife, Audrey Maude, and their daughter, Gladys.

Unexpectedly "Dora" makes one friend, Morton Gower, a shy and studious lad who likes to read. They return one day from a walk to find Gladys in a furious temper. Gladys sees that "Dora" and her father are sent off alone to look after the farm and when she finds that Morton goes out to visit Dora makes her own light move out early. She begins to pay violent attention to Morton, eventually winning him away from "Dora."

Dora wondered how her dress was made. It was pale green georgette, trimmed with a wide, black velvet ribbon. It was very expensive. With it she wore an orange color tunic and black drop earrings. Dora—nor anyone else in Norristown—had never seen such a startling figure.

As soon after supper as they comfortably could, the four guests drove away. Dora silently washed dishes. Jim silently helped her to the kitchen. "Too bad to have this extra work," she sympathized finally.

"Oh, but I was so glad to have them," she protested. She would have cooked millions of meals and washed millions of dishes and ironed to have seen and listened to this woman who was so totally different from anything she had ever seen or read about.

Next day Gloria drove out—with Morton. Dora handed her the volume. "But I thought you wanted to read it," she said. "I have—," and as Gloria looked surprised, "I read it all night."

"But, good heavens! You are enthusiastic!"

"It told me so many things I wanted to know," Dora confessed, flushing with embarrassment under Gloria's steady gaze. "Besides, I should have had time for the rest of the week."

She turned away as Peter came, but she watched Gloria as she walked back to the old farmhouse. She had a glimmer of today—but when a glimmer! She could not know it came from Peter. Peter was holding out for too much money. As they drove away, she heard Gloria say to Morton, "What a queer, charming little girl! Are all the others as nice?"

She couldn't believe Gloria meant her, but a wave of gratitude went over her that made her want to kiss the hand of the newcomer, that sent her to her room to hide sudden and inexplicable tears.

To Be Continued.

HEART AND HOME

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am 21 years old and have been married a year and a half. I have always had to support myself and part of the time my husband. I always gave him money and paid the greater part of the bills. As he loves me, I am everywhere I overlooked many faults. I sincerely loved him, but he grew discontented and so we decided to part. He went north and upon leaving made me think he cared for me. He has been gone five weeks and hasn't written to me once. Do you think a man who cared for his wife could act that way? Don't you think it is a cruel way to treat a girl? Would you advise me to write him or to let him go? I would like to know if I should write him or to let him go. I would like to know if I should write him or to let him go.

DISTRACTED GIRL

Your husband is selfish and spoiled; he thinks only of his own comfort and treats about you. I would advise divorce, because you are too young to remain tied to a man who does not fulfill his first duty to you and that is to support you. I do think if he loved you as he should he would write. I would advise a divorce in a case like this.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a married woman and the mother of two children. My husband is a fine man and we have a lovely home and almost everything we want. But there is something that troubles me and it seems as if I cannot overcome it; there is something my friends seem to hold against me.

I have lived in this city all of my married life and it seems that some one who has a desire to hurt me started some cruel gossip a couple of years ago. A lot of people started talking and for a while it was awful. I determined to prove that it was a lie and have tried in every way possible to overlook the unkindness of those who I thought were friends and to live a good kind life. While I know there has been no talk for a long time, it seems that they must still hold something against me for they do not invite me to their homes. All of my friends tell me that I am a good woman and that they need help or money; they always call on me. Occasionally some woman will go out of her way to say something malicious and it hurts me because I have no feeling of animosity toward anyone.

I try to comfort myself with the assurance that I have a great deal more of the good things of life than those who treat me this way. I have a good and true husband and wonderful children. But I do dislike to feel that women of my acquaintance seem not to like me and I would like to know if there is anything I can do to win their true friendship.

People can be so cruel and self-righteous. They will stand and think that their own conduct is above reproach, while they are living a life absolutely contrary to the teachings of their Christ. They gossip and condemn and know nothing of loyalty and tolerance.

Almost every one has some burden to carry through life, a lesson to learn which is hard but must be conquered. The only way I can see to get out of my trouble is to run away from it. If your husband could locate in some other state or large city you could make new friends and start over again. If it is impossible I would advise you to go on as you have been doing, helping where you can, content with the knowledge that you have done no wrong and are trying as best you can to work out your problems and carry your cross in your own way.

TODAY'S RECIPES

"Never Fail" Cookies—One cup brown sugar, one cup molasses, two eggs (one well beaten), one cup shortening, two teaspoons ginger, two teaspoons baking soda, one tablespoon vinegar, one teaspoon salt, five cups flour stirred in, then knead in two cups more flour. Roll out with a little flour as possible.

Pork Chops—A good way to cook pork chops this time of year is to put them in a casserole with a quantity of crisp apples. First lay a chop in the casserole surrounded it and covering it with sliced apples; add a scant sprinkling of salt and a dash of pepper, with the meringue suggestion of butter or may. Then add another chop and then more apples. The casserole should not be too full, and it should be kept covered throughout the cooking. Another good way to cook pork chops in the casserole is to butter the casserole and then line it with a goodly layer of cooked rice. Lay in the desired number of chops, pour over them cooked tomatoes, to which have been added a little chopped onion pepper and onions if desired. Then add more cooked rice. Moistened well and cook in a casserole. Cook for an hour or until the chops are done.

Community Comment

FLORENCE SLOW HYDE, Editor.

This department of the Jansville Daily Gazette is published in the interest of all community work in Southern Wisconsin.

But one health conference in the state during the month of November had a smaller attendance than did the one held for Rock county, health officers and nurses at the city hall in Jansville. Walworth county center at Genoa Junction had the fourth largest attendance. Rock county more than doubled its first conference record on December 5. The next conference will be held on January 2, and it is hoped that all women's organizations will cooperate in securing a large attendance at that time. Miss Ella McGovern, nurse in charge of the center in Rock and three other southern Wisconsin counties spent the past week in Jansville in the interest of the next conference. The health center is under the direct management of the City Federation of Women, but an advisory council of representative women from all parts of the county will be organized shortly.

Every effort will be made to stimulate interest in the pre-natal instruction provided by the health center as Rock county statistics show an exceptionally high rate for pre-natal care and stillbirths and deaths of infants under one month of age. It is believed that the rate can be reduced at least fifty percent within one year, if expectant mothers can be induced to take advantage of the free advice afforded through the health conferences which are conducted each month by Dr. Mildred Van Cleave, of Madison, specialist in maternal and infant hygiene. Children of pre-school age are examined also by Dr. Van Cleave and advice given as to feeding and other problems of child care. The conference on January 2 will be open from 3 a. m. to 5 p. m. in a room on the second floor of the city hall.

Beauty Chats

By EDNA KENT FORBES.

A friend in Paris has been sending me long letters full of the most fascinating suggestions for pretty things that any girl can make for herself. One of the best suggestions of all comes too late to be useful as a Christmas gift idea—so you must be selfish and utilize it in a post-holiday gift for yourself.

The letter is all about hand bags and vanity purses. The new vanity purse is just large enough to hold powder and puff, a mirror, with a place for change and perhaps a bit of soap. One could get in a lipstick and the tiniest of nail files, but nothing more. Pouches like this are not going, going, gone. The new bag is flat and shaped somewhat like an envelope. Do you want to make a beauty, such as my friend described? It's simple enough. Take a length of black moire ribbon—the newest thing for bags. The length depends upon the ribbon's width. Fold it on itself three times and use enough to make the resulting shape exactly about three-quarters of a yard long. Cut a piece of moderately stiff canvas a little shorter and narrower than the ribbon and lay it on as an inner lining and box on the same length of white moire ribbon as you have black. Whipsitch or machine stitch the edges closely together, fold into three parts, like an envelope, whipsitching two of them together for the top of the bag, leaving the third free as the flap. Then—here's the touch—take a yard of black silk cord, sew a tassel to each end, sew each tassel to each lower corner of the bag and the cord up the edges. The long loop left over is the bag's handle. The tassels hang down below and the cord hides your whipsitching. Your vanity bag looks quite professional.

Mary Ellen—Eye brows or lashes can be cultivated just as easily as the hair, so you need not feel you have lost yours permanently. I shall be glad to furnish you the eyelash formula if you wish it. Send a s. a. e. repeating your request.

Adventure Trails

Hippy Horned Toad.

When is a toad not a toad? When it's a HORNEED TOAD. For a horned toad isn't really a toad at all—but a lizard. Betty had not some jolly animals since To-mah-to led her into the desert, but of them all she liked the friendly little horned toad the very best. He wasn't beautiful to look at with his scabbily, "horned" skin, but he had the cheeriest twinkle in his black eyes and ate his fly lunches with such happy gulps that Betty was almost tempted to try a fly herself.

"Where does he live, To-mah-to?" said Betty.

"Wherever he happens to be," laughed To-mah-to.

The Tramp: Kind lady, I ain't one or them what's soon better days, ain't no better days. I've bin neglected right from the start—been born in a little attic in Luanan while me parents was down at Southend enjoying themselves—Punch.

Elsie's father, wishing to delight his daughter's heart, brought home a kitten for her one day. However, the kitten soon proved to be unfortunately afflicted. Every day it had a fit, and after a week or so it died.

Elsie's father straightaway brought another kitten. This kitten, however, was even more luckless. Each day it had two fits and finally it also died.

Still Elsie's father was not to be discouraged. He brought home a third kitten. This poor creature soon fell a victim to the prevailing malediction. It had three fits every day. However, it did not die. On the contrary, it lived to a ripe old age.

Elsie's father described this strange case to a noted physician, and asked him for an explanation.

"That," said the doctor, "must be a case of the survival of the fittest."

The Story of the Bayne Family An Analysis of Life

THREE weeks ago we gave you the startling information that the Chicago Evening American after raising its price to 3 cents against its fifty year old 2-cent competitor, had increased its circulation to a point where it has now the largest evening circulation of any newspaper published in Chicago.

Two weeks ago we told you how this was done and why it was possible. It was possible because the Chicago Evening American built a newspaper that appealed to the coming generation—to people under forty and those who think under forty.

We also told you our reasons for building this kind of a newspaper: First, because there are more people under forty than there are over forty. Second, because such minds are more open to new things. And third, because although such people may have less, they spend more.

In other words, we have built a newspaper for those who are coming into life, not those who are going out. And the story of the Bayne family on this page illustrates the value of such circulation most sharply.

WE PROMISED YOU a most intensely interesting story this week. Indeed what follows is the most interesting story in the world because it concerns five-sevenths of all humanity.

There were seven people in the Bayne family, the father, mother, and five children. They occupied a nine-room house in Chicago. They also lived in your city, by the way.

Their parents were a good example of average people. Mr. Bayne made a little money and saved a little. He invested carefully. He lived conservatively. Mrs. Bayne helped him. She was careful with her household accounts. She watched her share of the expenditures.

Their house was not just a house. It was a home. It was called the Bayne home. It was well furnished at an average cost. They had a piano, sewing machine, a phonograph, good average silverware which they had collected over a period of time. Mrs. Bayne had carefully chosen her table linens and bed linen. In short, the home was complete.

To finish the picture the Baynes read a conservative evening paper as they sat in the living room after dinner, and they made their careful necessary purchases from its columns.

This paper told of events in the republican and democratic parties, of conditions in China and Moscow and of the daily happenings of the city, all very conservatively to suit the conservative Baynes, and all in small headings with small type.

But that wasn't all of the picture in the Bayne home.

The Baynes had "five kids." Much like other kids—a boy of sixteen, who had finished high school and could not wait any longer to get into the swing of life, a pretty girl of fourteen who was beginning to watch other girls who put their hair up, a gangling girl of twelve, all legs and knees and elbows and a terrible bother generally, a young hopeful of eight, whom everybody said was going to be just like his dad, and a baby boy who was no longer a baby because he was five and almost going to school.

And that was the other side of the picture. The younger Baynes were not interested in what was going on in China and Moscow. They weren't excited by the closely printed reports of the city hall, and even the pretty one didn't get any thrill out of the corner of dress patterns on the 16th page (the girl's weren't wearing them that way, anyhow, anymore). So the elder conservative Baynes had their conservative evening paper pretty much to themselves, which was what they wanted after all.

Then one evening the oldest boy, came home from work with another newspaper. He had bought it from the newsstand because he wanted to be a business man like other business men, and this was the particular paper, which after two or three experiments, he had settled upon.

It was a different looking paper. The headings were big. Their expressions were vivid. He could get his teeth into what they said and visualize what was happening. And on the sports page there was not only a picture of his favorite football star, but there was a corking story of the game he was not able to see that day, and a half page picture of the most crucial play of the game snapped just after his favorite star had bucked the line for the winning touchdown. There he lay, with just his face showing and nine men on top of him—but he was over the last white line.

This was perhaps the most thrilling moment in the young Bayne's life. Incidentally, it was a mighty good piece of photographic news on the part of that newspaper. He read the story of that game almost without breathing. It was young America speaking to young America in its own language.

A little later, the pretty fourteen-year-old has looked over his shoulders as he turned the pages and has seen some great big stunning pictures of three of the "younger social set" that all the girls were talking about at school. And a moment later she has secured part of her brother's paper.

And after that there are two evening papers in that Bayne home. Soon it comes to be an accepted fact in the Bayne home as all things are. Young Bayne even begins to take an interest in the happening in Russia and Washington, as his imagination is touched by more vivid reports; the pretty girl starts to change her mother's ideas about dress making and the kids clamor for the funnies, which seem to be drawn by people who have the same kind of funny bone as they have.

But time slips along and the next time the Elder Baynes really think about their children is when they begin to discuss the fact that the boy has been staying out night after night, and the girl is going to parties although she is too young and they feel they ought to talk to them.

And while they are still cogitating upon this subject the boy shyly appears one evening with another girl and introduces her and the two elder Baynes look at each other and a little shiver goes through them, because this was their baby, and now they know by all the signs of life that he is no longer a baby, that the man-child has grown to be a man, that another Bayne home is soon to be started and that the years have finally turned their faces to the setting sun.

Time races along about this period of life; races terribly. Almost as if it were a moving picture, the children come up into life. They reach up, stretch up, grow up and almost in a twinkling the very babies seem to begin to primp and shave.

And they're not interested in the interests of these older Baynes. They do not dress the way the elder Baynes dressed. They do not dance the way they danced. They do not even read the paper that the elder Baynes have read for so many years. They have another paper, a more vigorous paper, a paper with pictures and life and zest in it, a paper that deals vigorously with vigorous subjects, a paper that flashes its news in headlines that you get at a glance—in short, a young American paper for young America.

The next important move in the life of the Bayne family is the taking of a five room house by the elder Baynes because the older boy and girl are married and have homes of their own now. Then almost before they know it, they have a little three-room apartment because two of the others are married and only the baby is left. And the last chapter finds the elder Baynes boarding in an apartment hotel or living in a small cottage because even the baby is married and the old ones are alone.

And now there are five Bayne homes instead of one. They haven't the complete outfits of the old Bayne residence. They haven't bought their silver yet, their furniture is rather makeshift because these homes are in the making and all the appurtenances and appliances that go toward the making of a home are also in the making—very often—the money making.

But there is hope and vigor and life in these five homes of the younger Baynes where there is only retrospect and memory in the little home that is left of the elder Baynes. These young homes are going to buy this and that—are going to build so and so, are going to have this appliance and add that comfort. In short, there is nothing in the world that these five young homes are not going to have and are not getting yearly to make them perfect homes.

Every evening in these five young homes there is a newspaper just as there was in the elder home.

But it isn't the old, conservative newspaper of the elder Baynes. It is the other newspaper that the younger Baynes had learned to read and follow. It is the paper that was vigorous with the sports and thoughts and activities and filled with the news of younger America, that younger American paper for younger Americans. From its news columns, they get their news and views of life. And from its advertising columns they buy their wants. And there is much to buy because their life is new and their wants are many.

Nor do they change their paper as they go along in years, any more than the elder Baynes changed theirs. The more vigorous life of this twentieth century appeals to them in their forties as much as it did in their twenties, just as the quieter life of the latter part of the nineteenth century appealed to the elder Baynes.

And so this is the story of the Bayne family. They live in Chicago, in Terre Haute, in your city and in every city in America and the general trend of their lives is always the same. One family going out, five families coming in; one family slowly getting rid of its load, five families buying into life with all the money and energy they can control.

And in Chicago, the younger American paper that appeals preponderantly to the families of these new homes, "to the generations under forty and those who think under forty" is unquestionably the Chicago Evening American.

Certainly, there can be no doubt about buying the advertising columns of this kind of circulation for the movement of any kind of merchandise.

Please remember that twenty-four hours after you write or wire us, one of our merchandisers who knows Chicago and the Chicago market—not merely a solicitor—can be at your desk.
